The 2017–18 fiscal and academic year at the David Owsley Museum of Art will be remembered for record attendance, wide-ranging exhibitions, and foundation-building acquisitions. The museum continued to grow in terms of both size and status by adding more than 130 works to the collection and hosting exhibitions from across campus and around the United States. David T. Owsley continued to enrich the permanent collection and gallery experience with gifts and major loans. Charles and Kathy Harper contributed a significant Abstract-Expressionist sculpture, and the estate of Ned Griner, former director of the Department of Art (now School of Art) and an important artist in his own right, further enhanced his legacy with several gifts of works on paper. The cumulative effect of these donations will be to provide great examples of global art for study by future generations of students and the general public.

In the Fall of 2017, the inauguration of two exhibitions demonstrated the museum’s range, receptivity to campus audiences, and ability to collaborate across University departments. Engaging Technology II: Art + Science presented a selection of internationally renowned artists investigating the intersections of the arts and sciences. Curated by John Fillwalk, senior director of hybrid technologies in the College of Architecture and Planning and IDIA Lab, the exhibition featured lasers, electronic music, code as art, augmented reality, and even an alchemical demonstration with extremophilic bacteria.

At the same time, Action! The Anatomy of LeRoy Neiman’s Champions, generously lent by the LeRoy Neiman Foundation in New York, was adapted for display at DOMA. The eccentric artist’s brightly colored, highly energetic images of sports, leisure activities, and cultural events—including concerts, ballet, and the symphony—dazzled the public and welcomed new audiences. Visitors were particularly pleased with the innovative gallery installation and its sports-viewing, living room environment, especially the comfortable furnishings and historical highlights reel that contextualized the artist’s imagery.

In the Spring of 2018, the blockbuster exhibition Richard Diebenkorn: Beginnings 1942–1955 dominated all of DOMA's available gallery space. 100 paintings and drawings demonstrated the famous California artist’s stylistic development in the critical early years of his career. A collaboration between the Richard Diebenkorn Foundation in Berkeley and the Crocker Art Museum in Sacramento, California, Beginnings embodied DOMA’s desire to bring the best possible exhibitions from major institutions on both coasts to the Midwest.

A stellar series of programs accompanied the show, including the Petty Memorial Lecture by Dr. Scott Shields (the exhibition’s curator and associate director of the Crocker Art Museum), a memorable Music in the Museum program by Dr. James Helton, painting workshops, and several other related activities. We remain extremely grateful to Andrea Liguori of the Diebenkorn Foundation and Scott Shields at the Crocker Art Museum for lending us the exhibition and visiting our campus.

As you read the following report, please note the museum’s record attendance figure (35,499), the vibrant school programs, and the list of selected recent additions to the collection. These are all the direct result of a band of tireless and engaged museum professionals, which may represent the smallest staff of any museum of comparable size and scope in the United States. The University and city of Muncie benefit from their dedication and efforts, for which I am extremely grateful.

Robert La France
Director of the David Owsley Museum of Art
The David Owsley Museum of Art (DOMA) at Ball State University is an 82-year-old art museum that houses a world art collection with more than 11,000 objects representing civilizations from six of the seven continents. DOMA balances exciting contemporary and historical art exhibitions with engaging displays of the permanent collection in a rich, educational environment that serves both the University and the East Central Indiana region.
The David Owsley Museum of Art cultivates lifelong learning and recreation in the visual arts through its collection of original works of art, engaging exhibitions, and educational programs for the Ball State University community and other diverse audiences.

—Mission Statement, as adopted by the Ball State University Board of Trustees; December 19, 2008
The attendance for FY2018 broke a record, finally surpassing that of the previous high mark achieved during the museum’s reopening after a major expansion in 2013–14. The new high figure of more than 35,000 visits was certainly driven by recent major exhibitions. Richard Diebenkorn: Beginnings 1942–1955 alone attracted more than 10,000 visits, including guests from both coasts and Canada.
DOMA is a student-focused museum with an educational mission. While Ball State University students are the museum’s primary constituency, Indiana K-12 students are becoming an increasingly important part of its educational agenda. FY2018 witnessed the inauguration of a new initiative called the School Museum Art Readiness Tour (SMART) program, designed to introduce all Muncie Community Schools (MCS) 4th graders to the museum through state curriculum-based tours. Conceived in 2016 and launched in the Fall of 2017, the SMART program initiated a partnership between DOMA and MCS before Ball State University officially committed to formal oversight of Muncie Public Schools.

In FY2018, 240 groups preregistered to visit the museum for a total of 7,918 guided and self-guided group visitors. Overall, about one in five visitors came to the museum as part of a group.
A total of 2,093 Indiana pre-K-12 students visited DOMA in FY2018. The students came from a 16 different school districts and 14 counties across the state. The students were from the following schools:

1. Burris Laboratory School, Delaware County

SMART PROGRAM PILOT YEAR

In the spring of 2017, Director of Education Tania Said was awarded a Ball Brothers Foundation grant of $5,000 to start SMART at DOMA, a pilot program for all MCS 4th graders. The program met its goal to offer an Indiana art museum-based experience with pre- and post-visit lessons taught by teachers to all MCS students—more than 400 in total. In addition, museum education staff trained selected MCS elementary teachers and principals of MCS elementary schools about the program and visual literacy.
“Diebenkorn sought out to create trouble for himself in order to mitigate his penchant for color, the natural grace of his line and brushwork, and his easily balanced compositions.”

- Free entrance (paid parking on weekdays; free parking available on weekends)
- Four to five public exhibitions annually

DOMA offers several community engagement programs, including:

This event includes a DJ, refreshments, demonstrations, and after-hours opportunities to see special exhibitions.

- Quad Bash: As a focal point of the Quad, the museum is open late with giveaways, activities, and food for the incoming class in this Fall event to welcome students.

- Docent Tours: DOMA enjoys a large number of active community docents, who conduct tours throughout the year, including weekends. In FY2018, more than 33 docents contributed a total 1,319.75 volunteer hours to the museum.
In fiscal year 2017–2018, DOMA achieved new levels of financial support. Major contributions from donors interested in collection conservation projects and new acquisitions, in addition to the museum’s Benefactors and Friends groups, lifted the total to more than $100,000 in cash donations. DOMA’s signature fundraiser Art in Bloom also netted more than $10,000 for programs and projects.
