COTE Exemplar Awards

Recognizing those individuals and organizations who have a record of significant accomplishment promoting the sustainable use of natural resources or the protection of ecological systems.

Back-to-School Teachers Store

In recognition of its commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated by example in its recycling, reusing and repurposing of supplies and learning materials to enhance the classroom experiences of needy children in Delaware County.

George and Frances Ball Foundation

In recognition of its commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated by its support for the establishment, development and operation of the Cardinal and White River Greenways.

Meg Calkins

In recognition of her commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated by her authorship of two books on sustainable practices in landscape architecture; which promise to enrich relevant courses in departments of landscape architecture in the English-speaking world.

Edmund F. and Virginia B. Ball Foundation

In recognition of its commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated by its support for the development of the White River project including the pedestrian bridge relocation project and the extension of the White River Trail.

Ball Brothers Foundation

In recognition of its commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated by its support for the establishment and development of the Cardinal and White River Greenways, the Craddock Wetlands and the White River Watershed.

Les Smith

In recognition of his commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated through his work as a grantsman, designer, builder, and teacher who has worked to design and construct handsome, durable, sustainable, and educationally-rich park projects; which enhance the Muncie community and amplify the importance of the natural world in human activities.

David Ferguson

In recognition of his commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated in his major role of community organization, fund raising and coordination of the purchase of 70 miles of railroad track right-of-way for use as the Cardinal Greenway, his work to combine the White River Trail/Greenway to form the currently extended network and his continued service as a member of the Cardinal Greenway Board of Directors.

Phil Tevis

In recognition of his commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources and protection of ecological systems as demonstrated by his work as grantsman, designer, builder, manager and collaborator with community groups, teachers and students who have worked on various projects for the grounds of the Minnetrista Cultural Center and for the development of the Cardinal and White River Greenways.

Service Award

Recognizing those individuals who have served as a member of the Ball State University Council on the Environment.

Gene Frankland

In recognition of his commitment to the stewardship of our natural resources, the protection of ecological systems and the public's understanding of the complex issues that bear upon our stewardship of natural resources, as demonstrated by his service on the BSU Council on the Environment from 2007 to 2011.
