Gonzalo Morales Sánchez is a versatile musician with a passion for interpretation and conducting. Holding a master's degree in Interpretation from the University of Montréal and a degree from the University of Lanús in Argentina, Gonzalo began his musical journey at age 10, playing clarinet in youth orchestras in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

As a clarinetist, Gonzalo held the prestigious position of First Chair Clarinet with both the Avellaneda Symphony Orchestra and the National Argentine Music Orchestra. He also had the privilege of performing with the National Symphony Orchestra on multiple occasions, including a memorable performance under the baton of renowned composer and conductor Krzysztof Penderecki.

Gonzalo's conducting studies were guided by distinguished instructors Carlos Vieu, Nadège Foofat, Annunziata Tomaro, and Carlos Calleja. He served as Assistant Conductor of the San Martín Youth Orchestra in Buenos Aires, leading performances of iconic works such as Verdi's La Traviata, Brahms' First Symphony, Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, and Dvořák's Ninth Symphony. Gonzalo has also conducted professional ensembles, including the Tres de Febrero Symphony and San Martín Symphony. Currently, he is pursuing a Doctor of Arts degree under the guidance of Professor Gregory Robbins.
