Whether your assets are few or many, it’s important to have a will. It’s the only way to ensure that your intentions will be honored in the event of your death. A will states your wishes about who will inherit your property, who will be the guardian of your children, and who will manage your estate. Without a will, those decisions may be left to others.

QUICK ANSWERS TO KEY QUESTIONS.
Where there’s a will, there are bound to be questions. Here are answers to four common ones.

“Isn’t will preparation complicated?”
Not with EstateGuidance®. You’ll be asked a series of questions online that are used to compose your will. In many states, you need only add your signature to make the will valid.

“What if I have questions as I’m creating my will?”
The online education center provides answers regarding family law. You can also access fully licensed attorneys who’ll respond to you online.

“What about my privacy?”

“So, what happens if I don’t create a will?”
The state, not you, would decide how your property is distributed. In most states, all of your community and joint property would pass to your spouse if you have one. Separate property is passed according to a complex order of distribution, regardless of your loved ones’ wishes. By drafting a will, you can spare them a potentially awkward and contentious situation.

CASE ILLUSTRATION: THE FINAL WORD.
Laura was the single parent of a six-year-old daughter, Amy. She worried that if she were to die, her modest but hard-earned assets would not be available to her daughter.

The cost of a legal will seemed beyond her means until she discovered EstateGuidance® through her group life insurance provider. With it, she was able to appoint her older sister as executor of her will and name her brother and sister-in-law as Amy’s legal guardians. She felt better knowing that she would have the final word in protecting her daughter’s best interests.
