What is SI?
SI is an academic support program designed for historically difficult courses.

How will I know if there is an SI leader for my class?
Check https://www.bsu.edu/academics/collegesanddepartments/universitycollege/learningcenter/supplementalinstruction the first week of the semester for the SI list. If you have an SI leader, they will introduce themselves the first week of class and announce the days/times of the study sessions.

What does the SI leader do?
The SI leader will hold 2-3 study sessions every week and design activities and handouts that will help you to learn the material.

Why should I go to the study sessions? Won’t that just be “extra” time I have to put into this class?
You will have to study for this class anyway: why not study with someone who has already taken the class and performed very well in it? You also get the opportunity to meet with others from your class, to share notes, and to receive supplemental handouts (like study guides and practice tests) that you wouldn’t be able to get otherwise.

When and where will the study sessions be held?
Your SI leader will hand out informational stickers during the first week of class indicating the days, times, and locations of the study sessions and office hour.

What do I have to bring to the study sessions?
Your books, notes, assignments, and other pertinent material from the class.

Do I have to attend SI study sessions? What if they conflict with my schedule?
You are not required to attend SI: these study sessions are completely voluntary. If your schedule will not permit you to attend the study sessions or office hour, please speak with your SI leader about the possibility for other arrangements.

I prefer to study by myself. SI is not for me!
Our advice is to attend one study session to see if this service is useful for you. Students who attend 8 or more study sessions usually earn ½ to a whole letter grade above students who don’t attend!

Where else can I go for help?
You can make an appointment (via TutorTrac) to meet with a tutor. Your tutor will have access to the SI leader’s handouts. You should also visit your instructor during office hours.

SI During COVID-19
During COVID-19, SI study sessions will be held online via Zoom. As protocols are lifted, study sessions will be held on campus and online.
Policies and Procedures for Learning Center Test Administration

Before scheduling an exam at the Learning Center, contact Disability Services to confirm eligibility and discuss appropriate accommodations.

Students, not faculty, should schedule exams.

Students should schedule the exam at least 2 business days ahead of the exam date (the Testing Desk is not open on the weekends) by calling 285-3779 or visiting NQ 350. The Learning Center may not be able to accommodate exams scheduled with less than 48 business hours’ notice!

Students should take the exam when the rest of the class is scheduled to take it. Faculty must approve any exceptions. It is your responsibility to secure your instructor's approval for exceptions or rescheduling of an exam time.

Unauthorized aids, notes, phones, etc., will be reported to the instructor, and cheating of any kind will result in termination of the exam.

All other university guidelines for test taking apply to the Learning Center’s exam administration.

Test proctors may not explain or express opinions regarding the test. Clarification for specific purposes (directions, procedures, etc.) may be given.

Monday-Friday: 8am-5pm (tests begin at 9am)
